

Bath, UK

In Bath, traditional British drinks and local specialties are popular. The city is known for its historic pubs, where you can enjoy a pint of local ale or cider. Bath Ales, a local brewery, offers a range of craft beers such as Gem, a classic amber ale. The area is also known for its cider, with several local producers offering varieties made from West Country apples. For something more refined, visitors can enjoy gin from the Bath Distillery, which produces Bath Gin, a local favorite often served in stylish gin bars around the city. Traditional British teas, especially during afternoon tea sessions, are also widely enjoyed.

Manchester, UK

Manchester has a vibrant drinking culture with a mix of traditional pubs, modern bars, and craft breweries. The city is known for its local ales and craft beers, with breweries like Cloudwater Brew Co. and Marble Brewery leading the way. Manchester Gin, produced locally, is a popular choice in the city's numerous gin bars. In addition to beers and gin, Manchester offers a variety of cocktail bars where mixologists create unique drinks. Traditional English ciders and a selection of wines are also commonly enjoyed. During match days, you'll often find locals enjoying a pint of beer at one of the many pubs.

Los Angeles, USA

Los Angeles is famous for its diverse and trendy drink scene. Craft cocktails are incredibly popular, with mixologists creating innovative drinks using local ingredients and artisanal spirits. Margaritas, influenced by the city's proximity to Mexico, are a favorite, especially in numerous Mexican restaurants and bars. Craft beer is also a big deal, with local breweries like Golden Road Brewing and Angel City Brewery offering a wide range of beers. Wine is another staple, with California's wine country influencing many of the city's wine bars. Health-conscious options like kombucha cocktails and organic wines are also on the rise.

Florida, USA

Florida's drink scene is heavily influenced by its tropical climate and cultural diversity. Key lime pie martinis and mojitos are popular choices, reflecting the state's Cuban influence. Craft beer is booming, with breweries like Cigar City Brewing in Tampa and Wynwood Brewing in Miami leading the charge. Florida is also known for its citrus-infused drinks, with many cocktails featuring orange, grapefruit, and lime juices. Rum-based drinks, such as the classic rum runner or a pina colada, are favorites in beach bars. In Miami, Cuban coffee and cortaditos are popular non-alcoholic options that pack a punch.

Michigan, USA

Michigan boasts a thriving craft beer scene, with Founders Brewing Co. in Grand Rapids and Bell's Brewery in Kalamazoo among the most well-known. The state's natural resources also contribute to its cider production, with hard cider being a popular choice. Michigan's cherry industry influences many drinks, with cherry-infused beers and cocktails being local favorites. Detroit's cocktail scene is on the rise, featuring bars that serve craft cocktails made with local spirits. Wine from the Michigan wine country, particularly from the Traverse City area, is also well-regarded, especially the state's Rieslings and Chardonnays.

Colorado, USA

Colorado is renowned for its craft beer culture, with more than 400 breweries across the state. Denver's Great American Beer Festival is a testament to the state's love for beer, showcasing a wide variety of brews from local and national breweries. In addition to beer, Colorado is known for its craft distilleries producing high-quality spirits such as whiskey, vodka, and gin. Stranahan's Colorado Whiskey is a notable example. The state's outdoor lifestyle also lends itself to enjoying drinks in scenic settings, with many breweries and distilleries offering beautiful mountain views. Colorado wines, particularly from the Western Slope, are also gaining recognition.
